player, being awesome at your job will come down to putting the hours in. The more practicing you do, the better. But to see the absolute best results, you need to be strategic about it. This means being purposeful with your time and ensuring your practice is a varied mix of theory and skill. The same is true of management. You can read dozens of management books and watch hundreds of TED talks on leadership, but if you don¢ÂÂÂt get some hands-on experience, then you¢ÂÂÂll be missing out (and probably sink pretty fast when faced with a real-life challenge). One of the best ways to get practical experience (aside from on-the-job learning) is to roll up your sleeves and get involved in some leadership activities. Not only are these a great way to get real-world experience, but they also mean you can make mistakes and get feedback from your peers in a zero-pressure environment. Sound good? Let¢ÂÂÂs get started! Leadership activities to try Minefield Tools: A blindfold and items to use as obstacles Cost: Nothing Prep effort: Low Split into two teams and blindfold one person in each group. Then, create an obstacle course around them (chairs and tables, crumpled bits of paper, tape stuck to the floor). Everyone in the group needs to work together to direct their blindfolded person through to the finish line using a limited set of words (e.g. ¢ÂÂÂleft,¢ÂÂÂ ¢ÂÂÂright,¢ÂÂÂ ¢ÂÂÂforward,¢ÂÂÂ ¢ÂÂÂback¢ÂÂÂ). If the blindfolded person touches a ¢ÂÂÂmine,¢ÂÂÂ they need to go back to the start. The team that gets their blindfolded person to the finish line safely wins. The takeaway: This is one of the leadership activities that¢ÂÂÂs all about developing trust and communication skills. Open Mic Night Tools: Zoom, if doing virtually Cost: Nothing Prep effort: Low Split the group into ¢ÂÂÂaudience¢ÂÂÂ and ¢ÂÂÂperformers.¢ÂÂÂ The audience should then shout out a location, a profession, and a situation, which the performers then need to act out together. For example, a library, an opera singer, and a A RO Nicicis A Era ™ â € Â ¢ uoy rehtehw rehtehw The silver, the better. The take away: Improv is a great way to cultivate communication skills, oneself and creativity. It also helps with the awareness of SHe ©, positive thought and encouragement. Sneak-a-peek tools: lego/bricks, pen and paper/blackboard and pen, chronometer (the timer of the phone is fine) Cost: no prepa effort: bassâ € Â Â Â LEGO or bricks for this. Divide leaders into two teams, more a volunteer. The volunteer builds a block structure (â € Â ™ make sure it is complex but replicable) outside the view of the two teams. Once â €, Â ™ a garment of each team comes to see the structure for 10 seconds. Then they come back to their teams and have 30 seconds to explain how to build the structure. The teams have a minute to build. When the minute is over, another person of the team goes to the original structure to take a look and bring the instructions back. She crosses every person of the team. Once all â € â ™ have had their turn, the structures are taken out and compared with the original. The team with the creation that most resembles the original victories. Take Away: this leadership activity creates teamwork, recall and education. Castaway Tools: zoom or chat app, whether to work remotely cost: no prepa effort: low image you for all Â Â Â Â Â Â ™ blocked on a desert island. As a team, you all have to work together to decide on five elements that are essential for your survival. Think of the bottles of water and knives rather than a favorite novel. If your team is virtual, you can do it via zoom or chat app. The take away: this game is all about communication, teamwork, compromise, planning, creativity and risk taking. Team Crest Tools: pen and paper, more zoom whether to do this at a distance cost: no prepa effort: low a family crest is a visual representation of that familyâ € .inoizes .inoizes orttauq ni alredivid e atserc amrof anu erangesid id ardauqs ingo a etedeihc ,idniuQ .erdauqs eloccip ni esivid is ,atitrap atseuq reP .irolav e azrof id itnup In the team then works together to choose reasons that represent the following four things: key value, enabling most important leadership¹, better skills to influence others is the most important part of the team¹ to cultivate. Once the ridges are over, the teams present them to the larger team¹ with reasons why they chose the things they did, as well as any struggle they had in making a decision. This can also function as an asset virtual team building. Ask a person to draw the crest to present themselves as a team through Zoom. Alternatively, use a diagram tool (such as Cacoo) to work together on a drawing at the same time. The Takeaway: capacity to achieve the alignment Â is an important skill managerial and this game will help you a for this. Leading inspiration tools: zoom, if you work remotely cost: nothing to prepare: low by extraordinary Ted-Talkers and legendary football managers, to talk about hosts and political figures-The world is full of fantastic leaders and we can learn from their successes. Gather the group together, then ask each person in the group to discuss a leader whom they admire and why©. The Takeaway: the skills listening and conversation are at the heart of this exercise. You'll also learn a wide range of leaders and leadership styles. Taller tower tools¹: Abstract objects for building a tower cost: nothing to prepare: average divided into two groups, with an even number of people on each side (or as close as possible). Give each team objects for construction (same number and type per team). Within a certain time limit, each team must then create the highest possible independent tower¹. The TakeAway: This game encourages teamwork, communication and skills troubleshooting identifies the tools of difference: none No trainer effort: low division into two equal lines, with each person who faces the opposite person.
